

DI-XL Dissemination and Exploitation via Libraries: for Success and Sustainability of LLP Results

A Project to bring the results of the lifelong learning projects to libraries and to bring libraries in the centre of lifelong learning projects

Di-XL project has managed to:

- Develop a model of cooperation between libraries and organisations that implement lifelong learning projects
- Introduce and practically test this model to libraries and stakeholders of 5 EU countries
- Create long lasting partnerships between libraries and organisations that implement lifelong learning projects

Di-XL project partners represent libraries and organizations which have implemented EU LLP projects

Conference "Libraries as Powerful Partners in Promoting Results of Lifelong Learning Projects", Riga, 19/9/2014

Librarians and representatives of the lifelong learning sector from all over Europe have attended the Final Conference of the DI-XL project which was organized in the National Library of Riga in the 19th of September. This conference provided the possibility to discuss opportunities and challenges in relation with the cooperation between libraries and the lifelong learning sector. It included the presentation of the DI-XL model, keynote speeches in relation with the role of the modern library, examples of good practice from all the 5 countries of the consortium, examples of possible exploitation of the DI-XL model in other fields and practical workshops. Representatives of the libraries that were more active in the field of the support of the results of the project were awarded. More information can be found in the following link: <http://dixl.eu/conference>

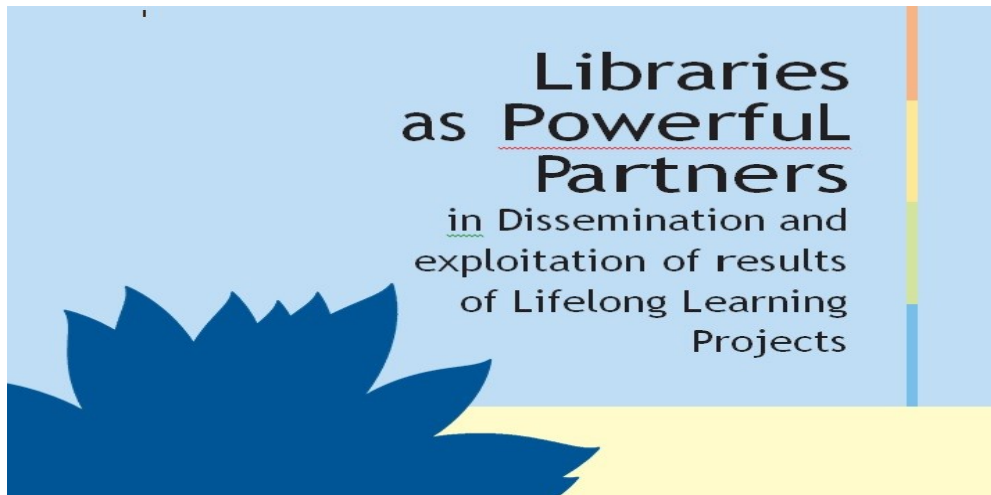

Introducing the Model to Libraries and Stakeholders

The DI-XL model was introduced to a variety of libraries and stakeholders in the 5 countries that participate in the consortium. The introduction of the model was made through specifically organized workshops, events, face to face seminars, meetings etc. In the website of the DI-XL project there is available the whole list of the libraries that have been included in the project as well as practical examples on how the model was implemented in the partner countries.

Publication “Libraries as Powerful Partners”

The DI-XL project has included all its main results in a beautiful publication entitled “Libraries as Powerful Partners in Dissemination and exploitation of results of Lifelong Learning Projects”. In this publication, DI-XL project, after providing some background information regarding the new role of libraries and the lifelong learning projects, it describes in detail the DI-XL model of cooperation and the benefits that libraries and organisations implementing lifelong learning projects can get from the implementation of the model. After the description of the model, the publication describes how this model was implemented in the 5 partner countries. Best practice results of cooperation have been highlighted in order to be used as examples and/or models for the establishment of further cooperation and partnerships between the libraries and the organisations implementing lifelong learning projects. The publication ends with practical tips for project coordinators and libraries around the establishment of such cooperation.
